INTRODUCTION

On April 4, 2004, the Securities Division of the Department of Financial Institutions ("Securities Division") issued a Summary Order to Cease and Desist, S-04-147-04-TO01 against Respondents, Millennium Marketing and Management, LLC and James M. Pielemeier, whose attorney accepted service of the order. Pursuant to the Securities Act of Washington, RCW 21.20, the Securities Division and the Respondents, Millennium Marketing and Management, LLC and James M. Pielemeier, do hereby enter into this CONSENT ORDER in settlement of the matters alleged herein. The Respondents neither admit nor deny the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law stated below.

1 FINDINGS OF FACT

2 RESPONDENTS

3 1. Millennium Marketing and Management, LLC ("Millennium") is a Washington limited 4 liability company with a mailing address in Arlington, Washington. According to its 5 materials, Millennium's primary business is to locate investment opportunities.

6 2. James M. Pielemeier ("Pielemeier") is the founder and President of Millennium.
7 Pielemeier is a former licensed securities salesperson who passed his Series 7 and Series 63
8 examinations. Between 1984 and 1990, Pielemeier was licensed as a securities salesperson 9 with the state of Washington and worked for Merrill Lynch. Pielemeier is a resident of 10 Arlington, Washington.

11 OTHER RELEVANT ENTITY

12 3. IPIC International, Inc. (a/k/a International Product Investment Corp.) ("IPIC") was a 13 Nevada corporation that was based in California. IPIC was purportedly an import-export 14 company.

15 OTHER RELEVANT ACTIONS

16 4. On November 17, 2003, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") filed 17 an emergency civil action against IPIC and several individuals associated with it. SEC v.
18 IPIC International, Inc., et al. Civil Action No. 3:03-CV-2781-P (N.D. Tex). The SEC
19 alleged that the defendants fraudulently raised at least $160 million, through a massive Ponzi
20 scheme that targeted members of evangelical Christian congregations as part of an affinity 21 fraud. The Court granted the SEC's motion for an asset freeze and the appointment of a 22 receiver.

1 5. On November 18, 2003, the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Texas
2 unsealed an indictment against several individuals associated with IPIC, and agents for the 3 FBI and IRS arrested the indicted individuals.

4 NATURE OF THE OFFERINGS

5 6. This action involves James Pielemeier, a former licensed securities salesperson, who 6 between at least April and October 2003, offered and sold unregistered investments in 7 approximately a dozen joint ventures related to IPIC to at least twenty investors who reside 8 primarily in Washington and Oregon. Millennium's investors ultimately lost approximately 9 $450,000 in IPIC-related investments. Pielemeier later raised over $100,000 through the offer 10 and sale of other Millennium joint venture agreements involving real estate ventures in 11 Mexico and Belize.

12 7. Pielemeier formed Millennium in March 2003 to facilitate IPIC-related investments.
13 As part of his solicitations, Pielemeier created and distributed several documents to investors, 14 including an overview of Millennium, joint venture proposals, and joint venture agreements.
15 In describing the investments, Pielemeier represented that Millennium had entered into 16 agreements with IPIC to provide funding to IPIC to purchase manufactured products at 17 "highly discounted prices" that would later be resold at "lower than normal wholesale prices."
18 Respondents failed to disclose the identity of the purchaser of the products in the purported 19 joint ventures and referred only to a "Customer" whose "name shall remain confidential."

20 8. Each joint venture generally involved one type of product, including paint, latex
21 condoms, toy trucks, and electric scooters. Under the terms of IPIC's joint venture 22 agreements with Millennium (hereinafter "IPIC joint ventures"), IPIC was responsible for 23

1 accomplishing all activities necessary to purchase and resell the goods, and Millennium had 2 no duties or obligation in connection with the operations of the joint venture. Profits from 3 each joint venture were to be divided equally between Millennium and IPIC.

4 9. Pielemeier, in turn, offered individual investors the opportunity to enter into a second, 5 related joint venture agreement with Millennium, which would entitle them to a share of 6 Millennium's profits from its joint venture with IPIC (hereinafter "Millennium joint 7 ventures"). After a portion of the profits from the joint venture was donated to charity, 8 Millennium was typically entitled to 40% of the net profits as a "management fee" and 9 individual investors would receive the remaining 60% of the net profits. As in the case of the 10 IPIC joint ventures, investors in the Millennium joint ventures had no duties or obligations
11 relating to the operation of the joint venture. In the Millennium joint venture agreements, 12 both Pielemeier and the investor acknowledged and agreed that the investor's capital 13 contribution may be construed as involving the sale and purchase of a security as defined by 14 Washington securities laws.

15 10. Pielemeier found prospective investors for Millennium joint ventures by speaking to 16 members of Christian churches in Washington, and by receiving referrals. In at least one 17 instance, Pielemeier entered into an oral agreement to share a portion of the profits as a 18 referral fee. To win the trust of investors, Pielemeier created and distributed a document that 19 noted his twenty-eight year background in investments opportunities and touted his 20 "expertise" in securities, as well as his former employment at Merrill Lynch, a nationally 21 recognized broker-dealer. The offering materials did not disclose that Pielemeier was not 22 licensed to sell securities in Washington and had not been licensed since 1990.

1 11. The Respondents lured investors by leading them to expect extraordinary returns within 2 a matter of weeks. Pielemeier distributed offering documents that represented that 3 Millennium's joint venture partners had received net returns of 20% to 35% per joint venture, 4 within a typical time frame of 120 days. In joint venture proposals, the Respondents led 5 investors to believe that they would receive net returns of 30% or greater within as little as 90 6 to 120 days.

7 12. Pielemeier directed prospective investors to sign documents containing non-disclosure 8 and confidentiality clauses that prohibiting them from discussing the purported investment 9 program. When an investor agreed to invest, Pielemeier had them sign a Millennium joint 10 venture agreement and directed them to make out a check out to Millennium, or transfer funds
11 to Millennium's bank account in Washington. In most instances, after a number of investors 12 had deposited their funds at Millennium's bank account, Pielemeier wired their pooled funds 13 to one of IPIC's bank accounts, as part of Millennium's corresponding joint venture with 14 IPIC.

15 13. In September 2003, Pielemeier notified investors that payments on the joint ventures 16 agreements could be delayed because banks were exerting stringent controls over 17 international wire transfers, but then added, "Be assured; all is going extremely well."
18 Unbeknownst to investors, earlier in the month, Pielemeier had written to the CEO of IPIC 19 and stated that he wanted to visit IPIC's operations in Panama because he wanted to "be able 20 to look an investor in the eye and tell him that I have actually witnessed the operations 21 there[.]"

1 14. In October 2003, Pielemeier began offering so-called "founders shares" to investors.
2 Pielemeier informed his investors that IPIC would no longer be offering joint venture
3 opportunities, but that IPIC was going to take the company public and had offered 4 Millennium the opportunity to purchase shares prior to the public offering at a price of $2 per 5 share. Pielemeier led investors to believe that these shares would be selling for $6 to $12 6 within 90 to 120 days.

7 15. Following his role as an intermediary in the sale of IPIC-related investments, 8 Pielemeier sold other Millennium joint ventures agreements involving real estate ventures in 9 foreign countries. Between October and November 2003, Pielemeier raised approximately 10 $90,000 from investors through the offer and sale of Millennium joint ventures agreements
11 involving beachfront lots in Mexico. Offering materials distributed by the Respondents stated 12 that money raised by Millennium would be used to provide funding to another company that 13 would purchase subdivided lots in the Yucatan Peninsula. Individual investors were passive 14 and relied on Pielemeier to generate a return on their investment. After the properties were 15 resold, the profits would be disbursed to individual investors. Pielemeier represented that 16 investors in the Mexican real estate joint ventures would receive returns of 101% within 12 to 17 18 months. Months later, in May 2004, Pielemeier raised $35,000 through the offer and sale
18 of a similar Millennium joint venture agreement involving seafront lots in Belize.

19 16. In the offer and sale of the Millennium investment opportunities, the Respondents 20 omitted material facts, which made the information that was disclosed misleading to 21 investors. The Respondents failed to disclose material facts about the transactions that would 22 purportedly generate the extraordinary returns that were projected, including the identity of

1 the unnamed “Customer” that was purportedly buying the products from IPIC. The 2 Respondents further failed to disclose the risks associated with a secretive investment of this 3 sort, in which investors are deprived of any meaningful opportunity to independently verify 4 the representations that are made. The Respondents failed to disclose the basis and 5 assumptions related to the timing of IPIC’s purported public offering and the price at which 6 the shares would trade.

7 17. The Respondents misled investors by representing that there was only a “slight” risk
8 that their invested capital “could be at risk either wholly or in part.” The Respondents 9 exacerbated these misrepresentations by incorporating religious references about the 10 investment. Among the representations that were made to investors were that: “This is all 11 part of the wealth transfer system that is advancing the Kingdom of God” and past 12 performance “can give you an idea of the level of blessing God has been providing for our 13 partners[.]” The Respondents also included a clause in the joint venture agreements that 14 stated that Millennium would indemnify the investor for any and all losses and damages 15 arising out of or in connection with any breach of any representation, or agreement made by 16 Millennium or IPIC, or the fault, negligence or intentional misconduct of Millennium or IPIC.
17 The Respondents failed to provide investors with financial statements or other material 18 information related to Millennium’s financial ability to indemnify investors against losses.
19 When later called to account by one of his investors, Pielemeier replied, “if someone puts 20 legal pressure on Millennium or me then ... Millennium will be forced into bankruptcy” and 21 “a person would waste a lot of money trying to pursue such potential legal remedies.”
